

An international action

The political and social history of the New Education is based on a strong international foundation. From their origin, the New Education movements have developed in different countries on several continents and have organised meetings between pedagogues and thinkers from all horizons. Even today, this need for exchange and controversy has contributed to the creation of the movement Convergence(s) for New Education and the organisation of this third Biennial

Three international movements are involved:

- International Federation of Training Centres for Active Education Methods (FICEMÉA). Created in 1954, it is composed of 40 associations in Africa, Indian Ocean, Europe, South America and the Caribbean.
- - International Federation of Modern School Movements (FIMEM), created in 1957, it groups together more than 30 Freinet movements throughout the world.
- - Lien International d'Éducation Nouvelle (LIEN). In 2001, it was the result of a process of of the International League for New Education. It brings together the diversity of research and actions of New Education.

They are in line with the complementarity between the different levels of local, national and international action, with the ambition of welcoming the representatives of these three international organisations, the international levels, with the ambition of welcoming representatives of these three international organisations, in an intercultural and social transformation dimension for a fairer world.

The implementation of an Erasmus+ project will allow the participation of fifty people from 14 countries, thus ensuring a diversity of contexts of youth work in the framework of the European Union. 14 countries, thus ensuring a diversity of contexts of care for young people in formal and non-formal formal or non-formal education. Bringing together education professionals, offering them and debates, aims to consolidate professionalism through the contribution of the contribution of proven proposals of the New Education. While inviting them to the possibility of to join our common search for an education for peace.
